

DO NOT ROLL

James Donovan, chairman of the Boston Democratic City Committee, said to-day that he intends to have his party organization in splendid shape for the mayoralty campaign, and indicated that there would be no Democratic candidate in the field who would command the respect and confidence of the people.

The Democratic city campaign officially opened to-day, when Chairman Donovan called upon the chairmen of the twenty-be proud of. He was kind and gentle and was a housewifely person. He did not seem to be particularly care for the company of women. His earnings he usually spent at home or taking quiet walks in Beacon street and Commonwealth avenue and Harvard street.

A Graduate of Harvard.

Also graduated from Harvard college, and shortly after took up the commission business. He was an apt business man and made lots of friends on the street. I have already received mention of a party from many of his friends.

His mother died about two years ago and shortly after that I noticed that Alan was acting strangely. He continued of severe pains in his head, which were often times unbearable.

Although he was advised to take a long rest, yet the pain he refused to do so, keeping at his work. Perhaps if he had heeded the advice he would not have been prompted to commit such a rash act.

We spent our Summers at Falmouth, where we have a villa. During our stay there last season Alan seemed to improve, but when he got back to the city he relapsed into his old condition. He grew worse day by day.

My boy did not show heavily in the stock market, as some persons think. He carried on a strictly commission business, and was not interested in any movement on the street.

He never occupied himself, and did not suffer any losses in the fall of the year of the past week. His net was due to his physical and mental condition.

I have not as yet completed arrangements for his funeral. The funeral home will be held from my home at No. 140 Commonwealth avenue.

Suffered from a Stroke.

J. S. Fay, a brother of the young man, today said:

While in the general practice my brother had always appeared to be of a cheerful, happy disposition. I am inclined to think that the poor fellow must have been in a bad way.

M'MONNIES, IN ENVIY OF WIFE'S ART, QUITS HER

Boston friends and admirers of the celebrated sculptor, Frederic M'Monnie, are assembled today to learn that he has become separated from his beautiful and talented wife, who was Miss Mary Fain, child of their marriage twenty years ago. The news was received in a special cable to the BOSTON AMERICAN today.

Still more astounding is the statement that the reason for the separation between the sculptor and his wife, who is a gifted painter, was professional jealousy.

"One criterion in a family is quite enough," M'Monnie is said to have declared recently when his pretty American wife, who was married in Paris, is asked on pointing her paintings for the approval of artistic France.

No one knew that one studio was not large enough to hold husband and wife, the sculptor and painter, who had been married in Paris, and who had a separation. When and where this was decided is not stated in the two articles, but it is said that the sculptor, who until quite recently had spent several years in this country, had gone to live at his country estate at Grez-sur-Loire, and his wife, who had been in France, to her studio in Paris.

SHOP GIRL IS BRIDE OF RICH SOCIETY MAN

NEWPORT, R. I., April 11.—Fifty-two hundred shop girls, many of them friends of the bride, crowded the street in front of the St. Mark's Catholic church today for the wedding ceremony of Miss Mary Fain, child of their marriage twenty years ago. The news was received in a special cable to the BOSTON AMERICAN today.

CHRISTIANITY-FAKERS

"What is the use of churches and pastors and sermons if not one of Christ's commands is to be followed?"

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

Copyright, 1906, by American Magazine Company

LONG ISLAND is in this year of our Lord, 1906, settled with Christian people.

There is no population in a church, and no population in a people, who take the sacrament and believe in the divinity of Christ.

Churches like their tall spires in the air, and sweet bells ring out their message of love and peace to men and women.

She has achieved a reputation as an excellent landress; and her clientele runs around most of the "ladies families" of the island in which she lives.

She had made a little house for herself, and the daughter was the housekeeper, staying at home to make things cheerful

The Girl Loved—and Sinned

Now, as always happens, the pretty girl of sixteen was loved by a youth, and the youth was scarcely eighteen, and the mother told the children they must not

And, as has sometimes happened since, God made man and woman with the mating instincts, and mothers without the wisdom which causes them to talk intently to their children regarding these things.

New, what did this Christianity and devout Christian people do to help the mother bear her sorrow and to make the daughter through her time of trial?

This is a true story, the name of the town ought to be given; the names of every man and woman who prepared to be Christian, and who were more un-almost all the mother's pious look and their piousness. No one saw the phyllo-

They Were Real (!) Christians.

What she attempted to say her husband drew the week after the marriage little child of youthful love was born, the poor hard working mother, ought to be written on a public billboard and held up to the scorn and condemnation of all real Christians, real humanitarians.

The girl was scarcely seventeen when her child came. She had been reared in that spiritual ignorance which is the pride not to be forgiven. Judge not, lest ye be judged. Let him that is without sin cast

Sins of Many Are Hidden

Every one of these commandments were broken by these Christianity-fakers on Long Island, when they failed to give

Without doubt, were the private life of every man and woman who turned against the poor unfortunate family to be laid bare between men and women who hate each other, and who are not even aware of

All these things are greater and more shameful than the fall of a little girl

There is no prayer a real Christian should utter from his heart every morning.

SOMETIMES the vision of that land I love sits in my fevered brain when oppressed.

THEN like a bird my spirit wings its way through hazy air and through gleam of light.

Three Classes of Women and Their Needs

By HENRY W. FISCHER

THE working woman needs justice. The well-to-do woman wants making over.

So says Professor Paul Mantegazza, the famous Italian anthropologist, author of "The Art of Choosing a Husband" and "The Art of Taking a Wife."

There is no question about the propriety of his demands on behalf of the working woman, and those who have it in their hearts to agree with the rest of the

Dorothy Dix Says No Diagram Can Be Given to the Young About to Take the Fatal Leap Into Matrimony

They plunge over the precipice of matrimony in joy and confidence; and may Cupid be waiting as a life-saver to pick them up!

By DOROTHY DIX

THE most generous description that can be given of matrimony is that it is a doorway window through which a youth and maiden walk to a precipitous cliff called Matrimony, over which they

WALL STREET, New York, April 14—In view of the great advances the market has enjoyed in the last few weeks, professional traders are beginning to expect a reaction of importance. But they see nothing in America that could cause it, because general sentiment is growing more optimistic every day. Old traders say it is a matter of time before the market will break through a three and three-fourths point break in North Butte mining stock the sensational feature in the local market this morning. Ladies and Gentlemen—The Stocking Trust!

We Present to the Public, with Pleasure, a Very Solid Monopoly That Has Just Revealed Its Existence

Copyright, 1909, by American Journal Company

In a series of public advertisements the Stocking Trust of America has revealed itself and incidentally, this trust, as often happens, has talked a little too much and said more than it meant to say.

You know that the new tariff announcements included a heavy increase in duty on the cheaper grade of cotton socks and stockings—a much increased duty on stockings that THE POORER PEOPLE WEAR and no increase at all on the expensive stockings worn by the more prosperous. This interesting proposed tax on the mother buying cheap stockings for a family of children naturally aroused some interest. Thousands of women signed petitions against the outrageous tax. This newspaper and others throughout the country talked frankly about the scheme to tax workmen's wives and children under pretense of protecting the workmen.

The agitation was energetic and apparently it is to be successful. For it seems that the Senate has seen a little light and begins to think that perhaps this government MIGHT be run without putting an increased tax on the legs of poor children.

In the course of the agitation a new and highly talkative trust was smoked out and brought into plain view. A fire in the woods will sometimes bring to view an unexpected peccot, so this tariff fire brought out the weeping, wailing and protesting STOCKING TRUST.

Perhaps you saw the trust advertisements. These called the agitation against the stocking tax "pure bunk," to quote the exact and chaste language of the trust.

The effort to prevent increase in the price of poor children's stockings—says the trust—is simply an effort to injure the poor working man. Only department stores object to the tax, said the stocking trust. And even if the tax WERE increased, that would not make stockings cost any more—said the trust.

Nothing could be imagined more comically illogical, more ludicrously contradictory, than these Stocking Trust advertisements. It is interesting to see the trusts suddenly begin to talk, and to preach their wishes and grievances in big advertising type. Surely this trust's effort to make people consent to increasing their burdens is touching evidence of the trust's belief in the power of advertising.

Note that in its first advertisement the Stocking Trust said in the "biggest type"—This advertisement is published by manufacturers EMPLOYING TWO HUNDRED AND FIFTY THOUSAND MEN.

Quite a good many men to be making stockings—and casually, that announcement was a confession of the fact that the ENTIRE STOCKING INDUSTRY IS IN ONE COMBINATION ADVERTISING AS A UNIT. And fighting as a unit for the bigger tariff which would let the trust INSTANTLY ADD MILLIONS TO ITS PROFITS, at the cost of women and children.

In its second day's advertisement the trust suddenly changed its tune and its figures, and cut down the number of workmen in its employ from two hundred and fifty thousand to fifty thousand men. Some wise gentlemen evidently had warned the trust that it made a mistake in advertising the ABSOLUTE ABSENCE OF COMPETITION.

The Stocking Trust, getting excited, reveals itself, and in spite of its pleas and false statements, it will lose its case, and will not have the pleasure of increasing by twenty cents or more per dozen ITS NET PROFITS ON THE STOCKINGS OF POOR PEOPLE. Here are facts—perhaps the Stocking Trust would like to advertise a refutation of them—but we don't think it will try.

The making of cheap stockings is already immensely profitable and the increased tariff would simply be an increase of profit, permitting at once an increased price for all cheaper grades.

The workers in the industry would NOT get one cent more. The cotton men that demand special tariff favors are the very men that in Fall River and elsewhere, on May 14th, one year ago, reduced the pay of all employees from 10 to 18 per cent.

Among those that manufacture cotton products, the stocking men asking for special tariff favors are among the most prosperous.

For instance take the Rockford Mitten & Hosiery Company, a gigantic concern at Rockford, Ill. Its voice is heard in the pitiful appeal for "more protection, that we may make a little money, and help the workmen that we love."

The Rockford gentlemen are part of this advertising monopoly. Will they tell us what profits they have made, what dividends they have drawn? Have they not taken out fifty, and sixty and even SEVENTY-FIVE PER CENT. YEAR IN DIVIDENDS?

If a concern can pay for itself outright, once every two years, is it an infant needing more protection? If it really did love its workmen so passionately and yearn to see them happy, could it not cut out some of those dividends among the warpers? If a concern does not raise its workmen's pay when it earns more than fifty per cent. a year, would it raise the wages because an unjust new tariff added twenty cents to the tax on cheap stockings?

The Stocking Trust advertises the fact that the increased tariff, "after all, would mean only two cents per pair or a little over on the cost of each pair of cheap cotton stockings."

ONLY TWO CENTS PER PAIR. That ONLY seems funny to the mother who knows how quickly the heels and toes vanish from the stockings of growing boys and girls.

The trust declares also that the increased tariff would NOT mean higher retail prices. The prices would remain the same, says the trust. Food, and who WOULD pay the difference? Would the department stores benevolently unite to bear the burden, or would some wined merchant from empty space come swooping down with the two cents per pair?

THE POOR WOULD PAY AS USUAL. The trust says at a 20 per cent. increase its wholesale rate by EXACTLY THE AMOUNT OF TAX INCREASE, and of course the retail price would increase prices also—so that the retail goods as a charitable underling.

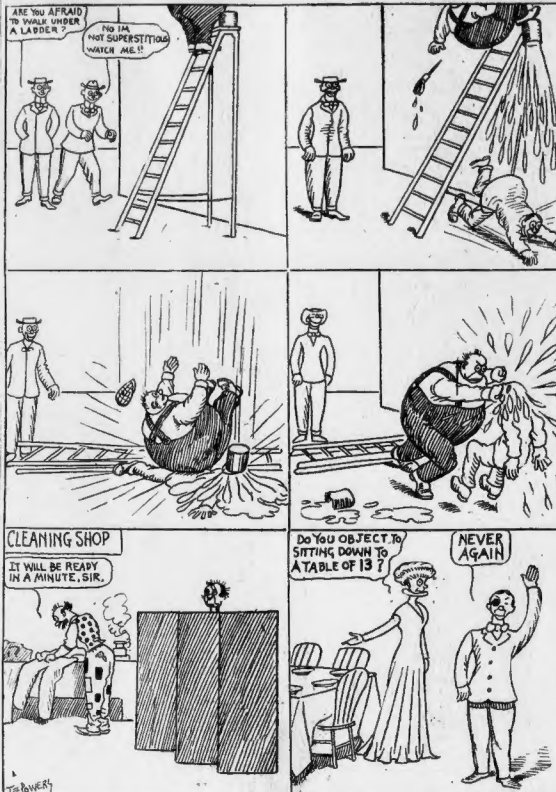

The probable increase would be around FIVE CENTS PER PAIR IN THE CHEAPEST COTTON STOCKINGS.

Millions of mothers know what that would mean. The tariff on stockings NOW amounts to more than fifty per cent. (Isn't that enough—can an American manufacturer earn fifty per cent. profit?) If it isn't a fact that there should be no tariff protection for SOCKS, OPOLIES? And since the Stocking Trust has revealed itself in this way, it is not a fact that the Stocking Trust has revealed itself in this way. And since the Stocking Trust has revealed itself in this way, it is not a fact that the Stocking Trust has revealed itself in this way. And since the Stocking Trust has revealed itself in this way, it is not a fact that the Stocking Trust has revealed itself in this way.
